Our Program

The Centers of Excellence for Labor Market Information (COE) are a technical assistance provider (TAP) for the "Doing What Matters" program. Since 2005, the COE have conducted workforce research to inform California community colleges about the industries and occupations driving employment demand in their regions. The work of the COE assists administrators with program decision-making, faculty with curriculum planning, and students with career choices by linking in-demand jobs to community college offerings.

What We Do

The Centers of Excellence for Labor Market Information:

Inform through regional labor market research and data validated by industry partners

Connect industry needs to community college programs and courses

Advance the economic and workforce development mission of California's community colleges to prepare a qualified, skilled workforce

Impact to Regions

COE research gives community colleges a competitive advantage in:

- Aligning training programs to demand industries in regional economies
- Creating and updating relevant programs and curriculum
- Pursuing grant funding
- Understanding workforce skill gaps
- Connecting to business and industry partners
- Accessing workforce data not available through other sources

Getting Started

Connect with your regional COE to access or request a variety of reports, data sets and GIS maps, such as:

Occupational profiles, including workforce trend analysis, labor market intelligence, education requirements, and projections of employment

Industry reports, workforce trend analysis, regional business demographics, industry cluster analysis, employer surveys, and projections of employment
